In our letter to him we are encouraging him not be discouraged but to continue efforts to improve his academic record and consider work at the graduate level. Maybe he is a late bloomer.

[Redacted]

Thank you for your letter concerning [Redacted]
was good to hear from you.

It STAT

As you probably know, we sent him an application for our Student Trainee Program. [Redacted] application was given a thorough review but regrettably we were not able to place him. The competition for the few analytical positions in the Program is extremely competitive.

STAT

You mentioned that [Redacted] wants very much to join the Agency. Please tell him not to be discouraged by this turndown and encourage him to keep working hard at his studies. If he is truly interested in a career in intelligence, he will probably need academic work at the graduate level, especially if he wishes to get into analysis, and he will need to keep his GPA above the 3.0 level. Tell [Redacted] to keep in touch with us and as he nears the end of his academic work to inquire about career openings.

Your application for our Student Trainee Program has been thoroughly reviewed and we regret that we will be unable to accommodate you in the program. The competition for the limited number of positions has been very keen, and we selected those applicants whose qualifications best suited our openings.

While employment with the Agency is very competitive, you may be eligible upon graduation. Please do not be discouraged by this turndown. Keep working hard at your studies. You will probably need academic work at the graduate level, especially if you wish to get into analysis. You will also need to keep your GPA above the 3.0 level. If you are truly interested in a career in intelligence, please get in touch with us as you near the end of your academic work.

We appreciate your interest in employment, and I am sorry that our response could not be favorable.

Sincerely,

Robert W. Magee
Director of Personnel
